Toy Fox Terrier Club (ATFTC) AD RATES

Fox Tales Offers the best price for targeted audience!

You can't always pick the moment a judge will look at your dog but you can pick your best photo to "show off" your current show dog to the judges. Yes, new judges and those advancing in the Toy Group DO "go online" to see what's winning in the breed.

If they are smart (the only judges you want to show to, right?) they will go to the breed club's website to get a feel for what's important to current exhibitors. They have the Breed Standard of course but most clubs put extra information on their websites to help judges do a better job.

The American Toy Fox Terrier Club wants to meet judges' expectations for information:

finer points of the breed, show photos, who is showing what and where!

You didn't know good judges seek out current information? Well now you do and this editor, with your help, will make the Toy Fox Terrier publication an online asset. So send us your advertisements; show wins, upcoming litters, new puppy photos, whatever you are most proud of. Also submit articles, like how to present TFTs in the ring, grooming, whelping, training tips, etc.

AMERICAN TOY FOX TERRIER CLUB PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

OUTGOING PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Wow, what a ride! These last four years have been full of changes and challenges. Through them all, the ATFTC has stood strong and worked hard to move forward. I am honored to have been a part of each and every one of them. I have made wonderful new friends and solidified existing relationships. I want to thank the membership for allowing me to serve as your President. I would also like to welcome Doug King, the incoming President, and wish him all the best. I am sure he will do an outstanding job and make the ATFTC proud!

THANK YOU!

Incoming President's Message

Hello ATFTC members,

I am excited to continue the forward thinking and movement of the club. Thank you to Cindy for her dedication and leadership over the past several years. I would like to encourage the membership to re-read my candidate profile to get a good idea of my thoughts and ideas for running the club.

I encourage the membership to get involved. Please contact me if you are interested to serve on a committee or would like to commit time to the club in a different manner. As we move forward, I have a lot to learn about the club and the membership. Please always feel free to contact me with any questions. We do not have secrets and personally I am an open book. I will respond to all emails, please do not use Facebook as I do not monitor my account. If you don't receive a response from me in what would be considered a "normal" time, please resend or feel free to contact me via phone (559-787-2588). You must leave a message as I am rarely in the house to answer the phone.

Let's have fun, make friends and do what is best for the Breed and the ATFTC.

Thank you,

Doug King
President ATFTC

Toy Fox Terrier: History of the Docked Tail

By Anne Kieffer

-Docking Tails Although this has become only fairly recently, a very hot debate for our American breed, I believe having a look into the history of docking terriers is critical to understanding the toy fox terrier and why it is a docked breed. Working terriers are docked for the same reason as gun dogs. A number of working gundog breeds and of course, terrier breeds have to hunt game through heavy vegetation and thick brambles, where their fast tail action can easily lead to torn and bleeding tails which are painful and extremely difficult to treat. Docking the end of the tail eliminates the risk of injury and subsequent infections resulting from such injuries. Terriers which are bred to hunt below ground for purposes such as fox control, have their tails docked to a length which is more practical when working in a confined space and this is especially true for the toy fox terrier which historically has worked primarily in barns filled with heavy equipment, stall doors, nooks and crannies. The conditions under which these mighty toy terriers must work makes their long, often poorly controlled tails an obvious hazard. The drive of the toy fox terrier to remain true to its historical roots doesn't simply end at the pet home or the show ring. Research has shown that even non-working breeds which have an enthusiastic tail action, are also liable to damage their tails, even in the home. (Council of Docked Breeds (UK) 1991 / 2010©)

-Docking Bans According to the Council of Docked Breeds (UK), since docking was banned in Sweden in 1989, there has been a massive increase in tail injuries amongst previously docked breeds. Within the 50 undocked Pointer litters registered in that year with the Swedish Kennel Club, 38% of dogs suffered tail injury before they were 18 months old and in 1991, the number of individuals with tail injuries had increased to 51% of the group. Sadly, there is no such study of the very few toy fox terriers present in Sweden or other countries outside of its country of origin, the United States of America, as to what types of and how many injuries our breed has suffered due to the popular trend to leave their tails natural. It is unlikely until the tide turns in these countries back to docking that we will ever have an accurate and truthful account of the effect of leaving natural tails on the toy fox terrier has been or will be. It is commonly known that the docking of tails for dogs is a practice which has been carried out for centuries in order to avoid tail damage, for hygiene control, and other reasons. There are over fifty traditionally docked breeds which are recognized by various Kennel Clubs, currently, and the toy fox terrier is one of those breeds docked not for appearance alone but for a working purpose. Unfortunately docking has, in recent years, come under the scrutiny of the veterinary establishment, which has condemned the practice as an "unjustified mutilation", but more importantly, under the scrutiny of the animal rights activists. These activists are frequently against breeding and exhibiting dogs, as well. (Council of Docked Breeds (UK) 2010) However, breeders, dog owners and an ever growing number of veterinary surgeons disagree with this trendy view. Contrary to popular views on animal welfare, they believe that if docking ceased, dogs would suffer!

They fight back the tide by demonstrating that docking is a perfectly humane procedure when properly carried out, and one, which prevents far more distress than it causes. Like spaying and neutering, it is simply a practical animal management technique which should remain available to dog breeders and owners. (Council of Docked Breeds (UK) 2010)

-Judging Viewpoint Now, what do we do with the toy fox terrier exhibiting in the conformation ring when the history and standard clearly indicate that this is a docked breed with specific guidelines to the length of the tail? After all, there are exhibitors importing dogs from Sweden, Russia, and other countries. Some countries are under the tail docking ban, so what should be the response of judges when viewing the toy fox terrier exhibiting with a natural tail? The answer should be a simple one. Judges are required to understand the history of the breed and its standard, then judge the dogs in the conformation ring accordingly. Judges are more than capable of determining how to respond to natural tails for the toy fox terrier just as they are able to determine appropriate responses to natural bob tails on dogs exhibiting in the ring. But remember judges, you are at the forefront of any trends for our breed. Rewarding exhibitors with toy fox terriers that are not docked does promote the concept of natural tails just as narrowly judging them for one specific trait or another. Consequently, it rewards the agenda and promoters of anti-docking legislation. This type of judging leads to the extreme changes often seen in other breeds over time. Sadly, those changes are rarely in the best interest of the breed. Popular fads come and go, but the breed history and standard should remain constant.

-Breeder Viewpoint What should breeders do when confronted with requests to leave tails undocked? Breeders should keep in mind the breed history, the breed standard, and whether they wish to allow animal rights activists and foreign countries to dictate to them how their breeding programs should be managed. We, as breeders, should all ask ourselves if “personal preferences” or making a sale to foreign buyers should ever take the place of preserving the history of the toy fox terrier or the rights of American breeders to maintain the American breed standard of this incredible All-American breed.

-UKC Standard The United Kennel Club is the original registry for the toy fox terrier. The requirements for the tail in this standard are more specific. It states, “Set on high and on a level with the back. Carried gaily, above the horizontal line of the back when the dog is in motion or at attention; may be dropped when the dog is at ease. Docked with approximately 2/5th of the full tail remaining; equivalent length if a bobtail. Minimum length about one inch, maximum length about three inches, for dogs six months of age or older.

Serious Faults: Tail curled. Tail carried straight over the back. Set too low.

Faults: Too short. Too long. Not carried gaily when in motion.”

-AKC Standard In 2003, AKC recognized the toy fox terrier and a new standard was put forth for this registry. It states,

“The tail is set high, held erect and in proportion to the size of the dog. Docked to the 3rd or 4th joint.” Although, the AKC standard lacks the detail the UKC standard provides for the toy fox terrier, it clearly supports the standard of docking the tail. When exhibiting in the conformation ring, the strict adherence to the standard is of utmost importance as the history of this incredible breed is at stake every time a judge points to someone and hands them a ribbon.

-Conclusion Keeping in mind breed history, type, and function, it appears evident that natural tails should be closely scrutinized within the conformation ring. Naysayers will say the tail is unimportant and shouldn't affect how the toy fox terrier is judged. After all, good judges shouldn't be distracted by inconsequential issues such as natural tails, ears, coat color faults, etc. This mindset leads to subtle and even drastic changes to the appearance and functionality of a breed as well as to the loss of rights American breeders have long enjoyed. The concerns and issues of foreign countries should never dictate what happens in the American conformation ring. The countries with tail docking and ear cropping bans rarely have a quid pro relationship with the United States. In other words, if those countries import a docked breed from the USA, it can't be shown. For some strange reason, the USA seems more than willing to accommodate those imported with natural tails within our borders. Money? Philosophical change? Razzle and dazzle of something new and imported? Fortunately, the toy fox terrier should not have to face these questions as it is a 100% all American breed.

My stepdaughter, Amaya Rivera, showed in Juniors for the first time in Roswell, NM on September 5th and 6th. She picked CH Foxclassic Gone and Done It, aka Fritz, to be her Juniors dog. They both did very well, picking up a second place the first day, and a first place on the second day! TFTs are not the easiest dogs to show, but they both showed like pros and I am extremely proud of them both.

A FRIEND OF TOY FOX TERRIERS—LAURA LEE GIGLIOTTI

By Anne Kieffer

28

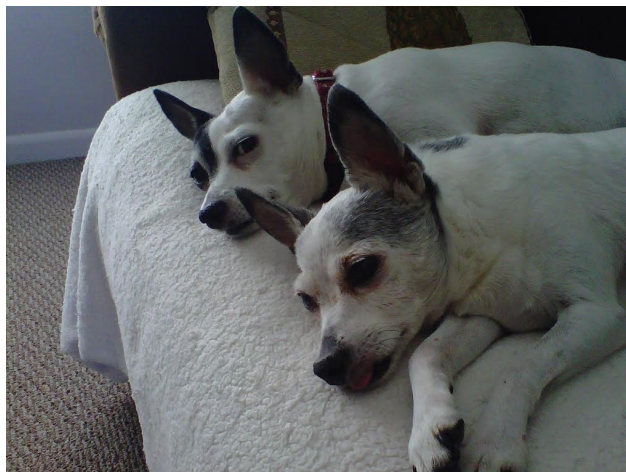

LAURA LEE GIGLIOTTI

Meet Laura Lee Gigliotti; toy fox terrier heroine! She has owned TFTs since she was a teenager. Laura adopted her first toy fox in 1981. His name was Petey. Pete went to college with her. The two were inseparable from the moment Pete arrived. In 1992, Laura added Heidi Belle as a friend for Petey who, by that time, was going blind. Jesse James came along in 1994 and in 1997 Pete-known as Papa Pete completed her TFT family. In 2010 Jesse passed away at the ripe old age of 17. Papa and Laura were torn. Papa was having a hard time adjusting to being alone, so Laura Lee set out to find him a friend. In 2011, Laura adopted Denver James who stole her heart. He helped Papa adjust, too, providing joy and relief for both. Vegas came in 2012 adding to the family. Last but certainly not least, Jackson joined the pack in 2013 from Fritz-Fox Toy Fox Terriers. Gigliotti states, "I could not image my life without a TFT in my life and hope that I can always have one with me!"

ACTIVITIES

"The TFTs are animated, happy, smart and agile. I love the breed because they are true terriers and love their spunk! Everyone who meets the dogs loves them and asks me what kind of dog are they. The TFT is a true big dog in a small body; a true bottomless cup of coffee with energy and spirit oozing out of the large ears!" according to Gigliotti.

Laura has travelled with her first TFT including activities such as skiing, boating, hiking and attending to college with her. “All the TFTs I have had were part of my family and easily could travel with me. The dogs can learn anything you teach them!” explains Laura.

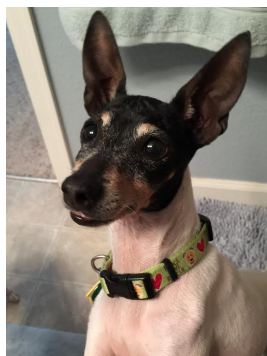

AGILITY TRIALS

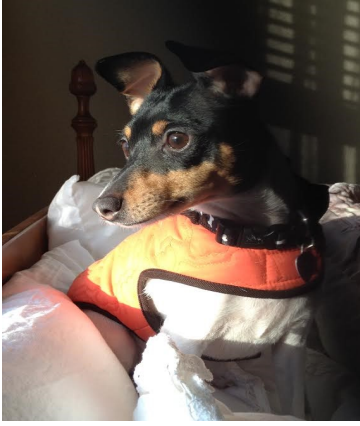

According to Laura, when Denver came along she decided to try agility. Denver and Vegas were enrolled in agility last year and Jackson was enrolled in family dog classes. She is currently working with Denver in agility. He is the only TFT in the ring at Friendship Academy and is so smart and fast!

FOSTER HOME

“This year she had the privilege of being asked to foster for the Toy Fox Terrier Rescue. Dillon was fostered from May to July and stole her heart. I love being able to help bridge the gap between rescue and a permanent home. Laura and her boys were able to socialize Dillon and work with him to open up and become the TFT he was meant to be. “Currently, he is in his forever home being spoiled rotten!” states, Laura Lee.

Foster toy fox terrier, Rose came in August. She is slightly older and has more socialization issues. Laura has worked to add muscle mass, weight and to get her health on track. The stability and love the boys and Gigliotti offer to Rose has allowed her to relax and open up. Rose who is currently awaiting a forever home.

LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES

Laura works with raw diets, holistic health practitioners, essential oils and love. Her passion is making sure the dogs have the best diets and supplements free of pesticides, chemicals and drugs to allow them to live the best quality of life possible. She has learned a lot about food and the important role that plays in the longevity and quality of a dog's life. The oils have been an awesome addition to ease anxiety, help repel bugs, aiding in digestion, cuts, and bug bites-the list goes on! In her lifetime, she has cared for 9 TFTs; all except the foster dogs have lived their entire lives with her living on average 14-17 years of age.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Laura Lee Gigliotti summarizes, "It has not been an easy journey as a foster. I love the dogs and see them open up and have to let them go. Some of the challenges with diet, teaching them to potty outdoors and just the general house rules takes time and patience and some days it is tough. But I would not trade the experience for the world. It is so rewarding to know that I was able to help them with a soft landing and be able to offer my love until they find their permanent home.

It is amazing to see what love and patience does to a dog that just needs a helping hand in getting their true potential out."
