Message from the Editor

Sorry! Again, I am a little late in getting the newsletter out. There was but one advertisement in this issue, which is a shame, since we had two specialties (Okla. and Calif.) that I'm sure had some winners.

Thank you to Janet Weerts and Susan Thibodeaux for the articles submitted, and to Jennifer Baerresen, Jennifer Duffy, Wendy Howard, and Mary Bowlan for sending me your performance news. Many thanks to Cheryl Bohannon and Susan Thibodeaux for their Junior reports. Thank you to our lone advertiser and as always, to Carrie, LeeAnn and Steve for your reports. It is much appreciated!

West-Coast Junior Report

On June 15, 2025 we participated in the local 4-H and FFA Tound Robin showmanship. Tombstones Take 'em To The Train Station (aka-Rip) was present and was handled by several children. He was the Tft example amongst Australian Shepherds, a Lab and a Sheltie.

On July 16, 2025 we participated at California State Fair junior Showmanship. He was the only Tft in a large group of border Collies, Sheltie, Poodles, and other breeds. This was the second year he has been handled by youths in the state final master showmanship.

In an additional event, the Two Cities Kennel Club participated in a community “meet and greet”, celebrating Purina Days at our local Tractor Supply Store. Both Tri color and tan/wht TFts were represented by Rip and Misty. They drew a lot of attention from the public, that led to educational and informational discussions about our versatile little breed. The pups received a lot of pets and some treats from the children.

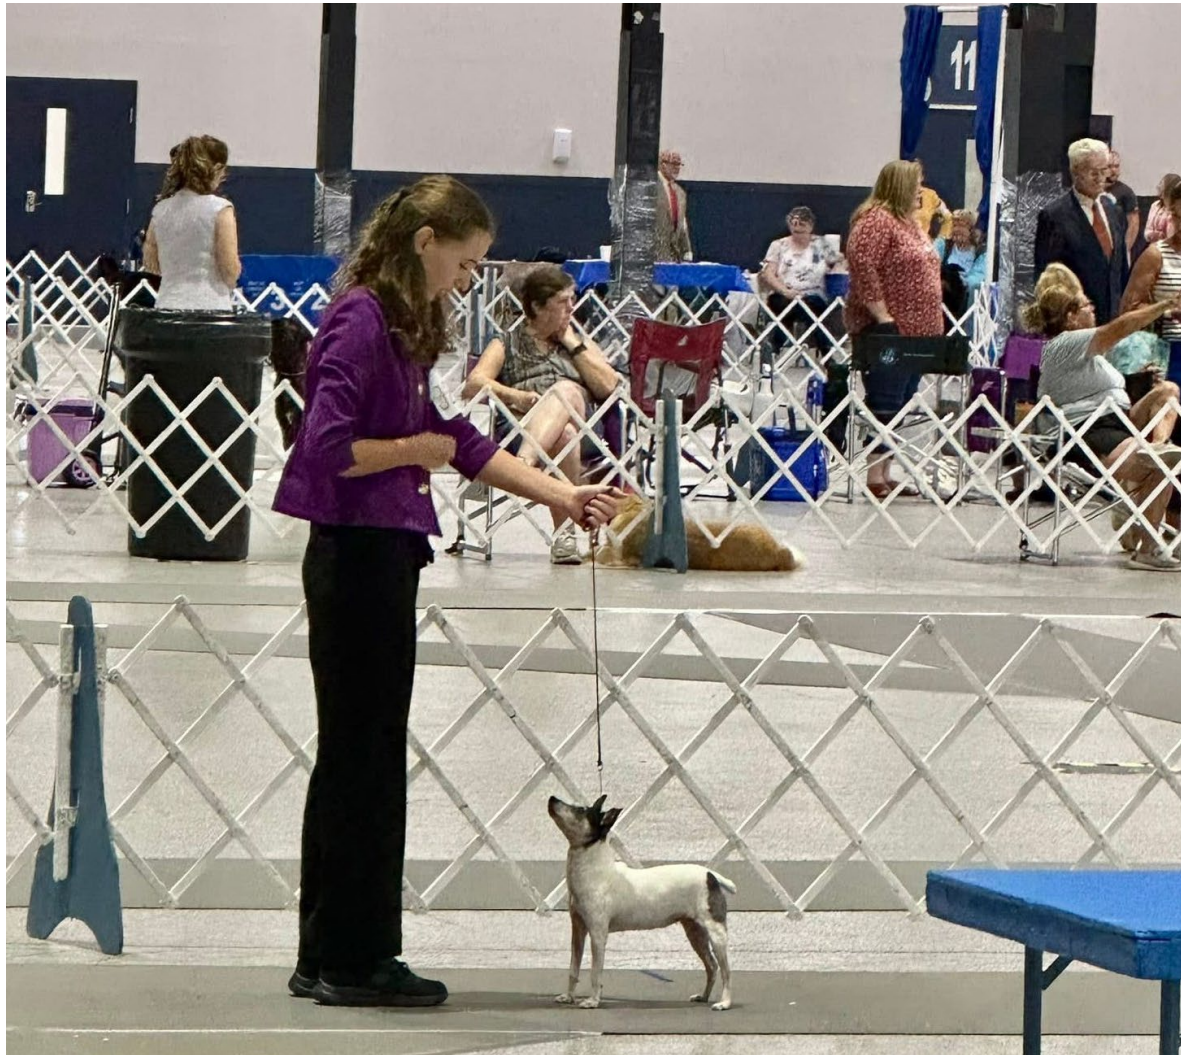

Southeast Toy Fox Terrier Breeders Support Our Local Juniors!

Arlene Irby participated in the 4H Doggy Day Camp held by the 4H in north Florida and supported by the Suwanee Valley Kennel Club. To introduce the children to a variety of breeds the club members held a Meet the Breeds at the camp and Arlene took her Toy Foxes GCH Roudee-Tombstone's My Maria (Maria) and CH Roudee-Tombstone's Little Miss Honky Tonk (Cass). Additionally, to teach campers about Conformation, Arlene used Tombstone Roudee Don't Make Me Send Rip (Cowboy) and Cass. They enjoyed showing the campers how the dogs are set up and gaited for shows and helped instruct them on structure and anatomy. Tombstone TFT (Cheryl Bohannan) and Roudee TFT (Arlene Irby) also supplied some of the materials for arts and crafts which for dog camp meant making dog toys. Arlene says she had a great time with this event, and they have been requested to return next year with her wonderful Toy Fox Terriers.

Susan Thibodeaux was asked by a local 4H club leader if she would loan a dog to a 4H member who has a mixed breed dog and but wanted to try an AKC show. She loaned her Sparkles, who at twelve years old really enjoyed getting back in the ring. The young lady and Sparkles won their Novice class with competition – a great introduction to AKC dog shows.

BARNHUNT

As the sport of Barnhunt continues to grow, the number of Toy Fox Terriers participating in it is dwindling. It is a challenging sport, even with breeds that are bred to hunt varmints! With that in mind, the following TFT's have received titles in 2025: Ahoska, owned by Paula Nowak from Winder GA Barnhunt Novice Title 04/10/2025. Fritzfox Man O'War @ Heartland, "Mani" owned by Mary Bowlan from Shawnee, Ok Barnhunt Senior A Title 03/30/2025.

The KEY is BALANCE

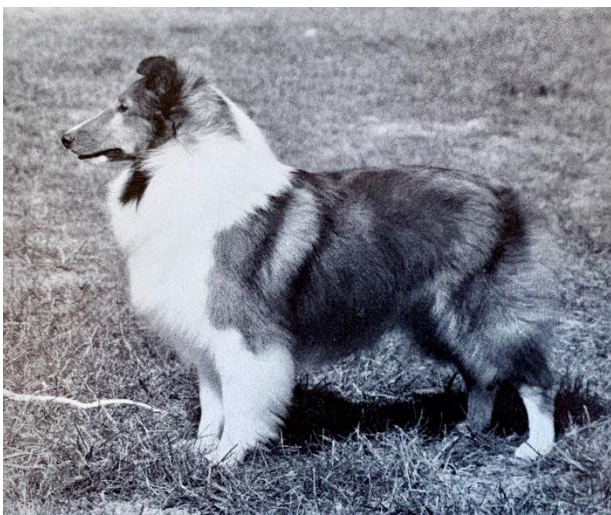

By Janet Weerts

When evaluating a dog, we all KNOW that fault-finding is considered to be a negative viewpoint, whether in actual judging or considering a dog elsewhere. “Look for the virtues” they say, and yet, fault-finding is commonplace...I believe the reason is that when something is NOT in BALANCE with the rest of the dog it stands out as if highlighted! But you may say, what if no dog in the ring is balanced or what if the only “balanced” dog has no type? Actually, the latter scenario does not exist! Balance (of its parts) will result in a typey individual in our breed (and the former possibility is a problem for the judge!)

Not yet convinced? First, we must look to our standard, counting no less than TEN references to balance, either directly stated or implied. The standard begins with “a well-balanced toy dog,” followed by bone described as “always in proportion to size,” further followed by actual (body) proportion as “height being approximately equal to length”, etc. Some portions are actually measurable as in the aforementioned body portions as well as the skull section with “the distance from the nose to the stop is equal to the distance from the stop to the occiput” and the “length of the neck is approximately the same as that of the head.” Other portions expect us to have developed a sense of symmetry/proportion, as in the structure/gait section (“movement is balanced”) as well as requiring an understanding of that structure in motion. While much of the relevant knowledge can (and must) be learned, I strongly believe the numbers and measurements are not a complete substitution for an innate ability, gifted only to some, of an artist’s eye.

Perhaps most importantly, breed type does not exist in a vacuum – in order to have correct breed type a dog must have the desired traits in correct amounts (in BALANCE) with each and every part of its anatomy. Too much results in a Fox Terrier resemblance while the other extreme creates a “common dog”.

To illustrate, below is a picture of superb balance exemplified by my favorite homebred of long ago. While the sheltie standard, as a herding breed, differs in the desired degree of angulation (90 degrees for reach and drive) both front and rear, her balance (in all parts to the whole) should be evident: from her head (length of muzzle equal to topskull), neck length approximating (or surpassing) head length and so on...when nothing jumps out to fix.

If I were now a Toy Fox Breeder, my primary criteria would, once again, be the absolute necessity for a dog (a “keeper”) to be BALANCED above all else. Food for thought, I hope ...

Cool-Down Science: How a Simple Head Dunk Could Save Your Dog from Heat Stroke

Summer brings long days of sunshine and outdoor adventure and for many dogs, that means backyard play, long hikes, training sessions, or athletic competitions. But with rising temperatures comes a real danger: heat injury.

Just as you might crave air conditioning and ice water after time outside, your dog can feel similarly. Even with shaded rest areas, cooling towels, and constant hydration, it can be difficult to keep active dogs cool—especially those involved in working or sporting events. Dogs primarily cool themselves through panting and some sweating through their paw pads, which makes them more vulnerable to overheating.

“High-energy dogs often don’t know when to stop, and it’s devastating,” said Dr. Cynthia Otto, Executive Director of the PennVet Working Dog Center at the University of Pennsylvania. “They seem fine, then suddenly collapse with heat stroke. And there’s a 50 percent chance they won’t survive.”

For years, dog owners have turned to traditional cooling methods like alcohol on paw pads or dunking in water. But what actually works best? Until recently, no one knew for sure.

Putting Cooling Methods to the Test

In 2022, Dr. Otto launched a study to compare the effects of partial water immersion versus applying isopropyl alcohol to paw pads. Dogs stood in shallow water or on alcohol-treated pads. The result: water immersion proved more effective and did not raise heart rate like alcohol did, likely due to the alcohol’s intense smell.

Next, with funding from the AKC Canine Health Foundation, Dr. Otto’s team tested four additional cooling techniques:

1. Ice pack on the neck
2. Wet towel on the neck
3. Wet towels in the axillae (armpits)
4. Voluntary head dunk in 70°F water

Dogs exercised for 10 minutes until reaching 105°F core body temperature or showed signs of heat stress, like heavy panting or a change in the color of their gums. Then each cooling method was applied, and dogs were monitored for 40 minutes.

The head dunk came out on top. It delivered the fastest and most sustained reduction in body temperature.

“This result blew our minds,” said Dr. Otto. “But it also made perfect sense. Dogs pant to regulate heat, which increases blood flow to the head. Cool the head, and you cool the dog faster.”

From Research to Real Life: What the Data Means for You and Your Dog

Dr. Otto is now building on her research with a follow-up study to explore whether factors like water temperature or substitute methods, like applying cool towels to the head, can offer similar results—especially for dogs who are panting excessively or who are unwilling to dunk their heads.

Even for pet owners without sporting or working dogs, this research offers practical, life-saving insight. A soaked towel over the head, a shallow basin of cool water, or a quick head dip could be enough to prevent tragedy on a hot day.

Real-world applications are already underway. During a medical visit in Zambia with Working Dogs for Conservation, Dr. Otto had the opportunity to introduce the head dunk technique.

“We didn’t know how effective it would be at the time,” she recalled. “But we could tell this had the potential to change outcomes for active dogs.”

Thanks to funding from the AKC Canine Health Foundation and Dr. Otto’s continued commitment to canine wellness, dog owners everywhere now have access to simple, science-backed tools to help prevent the deadly consequences of heat injury.
